RESEARCH INTERESTS AND IMPACT

My research focuses on Classical archaeology, African connections to the study of antiquity and issues of heritage and memory. I am one of the few scholars in South Africa working on the reception of antiquity and its continued (though reconfigured) relevance in our contemporary context. I am involved in research projects and teaching related to decolonisation and pedagogy; archaeology of the Mediterranean; the reception of antiquity in contemporary South African art and culture; heritage and collective memory; material culture and identities; Africa and the Classical tradition; and collections and collecting of antiquities in South Africa.

The following are key current projects:

1. Book: 'Reflections and refractions: The classical reception in contemporary African sculpture'

A book project focusing on the reception of the classical in African sculpture through work of five contemporary African artists: Swaziland-born artist Nandipha Mntambo, the Nigerian-English artist Yinka Shonebare, South African Charlayn von Solms, Kenyan Wangechi Mutu, and Wim Botha, also from South Africa.

2. Digital Humanities

South African Classical Antiquities (SACA) database project

South Africa, Greece, Rome: a Digital Museum <https://exhibits.stanford.edu/SAGR>

Classical scholars in Africa directory
