Management control use in emerging economies: how controls manifest and combine in South African non-profit organisations

This study explores the relationship between contingency factors and management control practices in non-profit organisations (NPOs), specifically focusing on the role of controls in managerial performance and the facilitation of organisational change under conditions of uncertainty. Four empirical studies reveal that NPOs perceive management controls as mere operational tasks rather than structured strategic tools. Contingency factors do not significantly affect control use, suggesting that NPOs implement controls reactively as isolated "packages" rather than interconnected systems, confirming the absence of a cohesive strategic framework. Weak systems integration is particularly evident during periods of profound organisational change, further emphasising the need for integrated management control systems.

A behavioural asset pricing approach: Perspectives from the South African stock market

Estimating a company's cost of equity is a contentious issue, often debated due to its subjective nature. Traditional asset pricing models assume homogeneous investor expectations. In reality, investors' views differ, affecting market outcomes. This study focuses on the South African stock market to explore how investor sentiment influences the cost of equity for JSE-listed securities. By enhancing existing models with investor sentiment as a risk factor, the study finds that sentiment, particularly regarding economic and business conditions, significantly affects returns. This highlights the need for incorporating sentiment into asset pricing models and investment strategies, offering valuable insights for investors and stakeholders.

The relationship between Big Data Analytics Capability, Digital Maturity, and Organisational resilience

This study conceptualises and empirically validates organisational resilience as a higher-order construct that is informed by strategic planning, adaptive capacity and organisational learning. Employing information society theory and organisational information processing theory, the study elucidates the role of technology and information in the relationship between big data analytics capability and organisational resilience. The results indicate that a firm's big data analytics capability is insufficient to enhance its organisational resilience capacity. Instead, the empirical evidence suggests that a firm's big data analytics capability is more likely to improve organisational resilience if the firm is digitally mature and has a data-driven culture.

FACULTY OF ECONOMIC AND MANAGEMENT SCIENCES FAKULTEIT EKONOMIESE EN BESTUURSWETENSKAPPE

Remé Lee du Plessis

Remé du Plessis, senior technical officer for ICT lecture venue support in the Faculty of Economic and Management Sciences, deserves recognition for his dedication, resourcefulness and superb commitment to excellent service.

Appointed in 2008, Mr Du Plessis has been instrumental in enhancing technology-driven teaching in the Faculty. He is widely known as the 'go-to' person for innovative lecture hall solutions. Staff value his exceptional interpersonal skills, quick problem-solving, and readiness to assist, often covering 10 km daily as he moves between venues.

Mr Du Plessis has also played a critical role during many crises faced by the Faculty over the past decade, including the 2015 Van der Sterr fire and the Covid-19 pandemic. Through the use of smart technology, he helped ensure that staff of the School of Accountancy were fully operational within three weeks of the fire, while his ability to help implement solutions on the ground saw the Faculty through the teaching and learning challenges of the pandemic.

Remé du Plessis, senior tegniese beampte vir IKT-lesingsaalbystand in die Fakulteit Ekonomiese en Bestuurswetenskappe, verdien erkenning vir sy toewyding, vindingrykheid en uitsonderlike verbintenis tot uitnemende dienslewering.

Mnr Du Plessis lewer sedert sy aanstelling in 2008 'n kernbydrae tot die bevordering van tegnologiegedrewe onderrig in die Fakulteit. Hy is wyd bekend as die eerste persoon by wie jy vir innoverende lesingsaaloplossings aanklop. Personeel waardeer veral sy uitsonderlike interpersoonlike vaardighede, vinnige probleemoplossing, en bereidheid om te help, selfs al moet hy dikwels 10 km per dag tussen lokale afluë.

In die afgelope dekade het mnr Du Plessis ook 'n sleutelrol vervul gedurende 'n aantal krisisse vir die Fakulteit, waaronder die Van der Sterr-brand van 2015 en die Covid-19-pandemie. Deur die gebruik van slim tegnologie het hy help sorg dat die personeel van die Skool vir Rekeningkunde binne drie weke ná die brand weer ten volle aan die gang was, terwyl sy vermoë om praktiese oplossings te help implementeer die Fakulteit deur die onderrig- en leeruitdagings van die pandemie gehelp het.

RESPONSIBILITY CENTRE: OPERATIONS AND FINANCE VERANTWOORDELIKHEIDSENTRUM: BEDRYF EN FINANSIES

Heinrich Swanepoel

Through more than thirty years of exceptional leadership, entrepreneurial spirit and commercial know-how, Adv Hein Swanepoel built SUNCOM, Stellenbosch University's enviable commercial services division.

He played a crucial role in developing and implementing the University's Tera Term financial system and also created the commercial model for our Neelsie student centre. Under his leadership, other successful businesses followed: the Print and Copy Shop, Maties Gymnasium, as well as the Matie Shop, the leading university shop in the country.

Gradlinc, a platform that Adv Swanepoel pioneered to connect potential employers, graduates and universities, is perhaps one of his proudest achievements and a striking example of how commercialisation can benefit the University.

Adv Hein Swanepoel het SUNKOM, die Universiteit Stellenbosch se benydenswaardige afdeling vir kommersiële dienste, deur meer as dertig jaar se uitsonderlike leierskap, entrepreneursgees en kommersiële kundigheid opgebou.

Hy het 'n deurslaggewende rol gespeel in die ontwikkeling en implementering van die Universiteit se Tera Term-finansiële stelsel en het ook die kommersiële model vir ons Neelsie-studentesentrum geskep. Onder sy leierskap het ander suksesvolle ondernemings gevolg: die Druk- en Kopieerwinkel, Maties Gimnasium, sowel as die Matiewinkel, die land se voorste universiteitswinkel.

Gradlinc, 'n platform wat adv Swanepoel bekend gestel het om potensiële werkgewers, gegradueerdes en universiteite met mekaar te verbind, is straks een van sy grootste prestasies en 'n treffende voorbeeld van hoe kommersialisering die Universiteit kan baat.

Die graad Doktor in die Handelwetenskappe (DCom), honoris causa, aan

her outstanding contributions to the discipline of economics, her intellectual rigour, curiosity and dedication to academic excellence, and generously sharing her knowledge through academia.

Often referred to as the “conscience” of the discipline of economics, Prof Deirdre McCloskey is known for engaging deeply with the foundations of the subject itself, but also for drawing lessons from other fields to help economic ideas better fit with reality.

As an economist and economic historian, McCloskey’s ideas are embodied in what she calls “humanomics”, reminding us that all people are knowingly or unknowingly affected by economic forces. More importantly, it stresses that human behaviour can often not be reduced to compact mathematical economic theories and equations – a factor that economics as a discipline should care about more purposefully.

While on sabbatical at the Stellenbosch Institute for Advanced Study (STIAS) in 2008, she wrote one of the books in her trilogy The Bourgeois Era, in which she explores the history of major industrial nations to challenge prevailing narratives about the origins of modern prosperity. She has remained a friend of Stellenbosch University, and in 2012, she returned to deliver a keynote address to the World Economic History Congress hosted by the University’s Department of Economics.

McCloskey is a distinguished professor emerita of economics and history as well as professor emerita of English and communication at the University of Illinois Chicago.

haar uitsonderlike bydraes tot die vakgebied van die ekonomie, haar intellektuele vernuf, ondersoekende gees en toewyding aan akademiese uitnemendheid, en die ruimhartigheid waarmee sy deur die akademie haar kennis met ander deel.

Prof Deirdre McCloskey word dikwels die “gewete” van die vakgebied ekonomie genoem. Sy is bekend vir haar diepgaande ondersoek van die grondslae van dié vakgebied, maar ook vir die manier waarop sy uit ander vakgebiede put om ekonomiese idees beter met die werklikheid te versoen.

As ekonoom en ekonomiese geskiedkundige, word McCloskey se idees omvat deur wat sy “humanomie” noem. Dit herinner ons daaraan dat alle mense, hetsy wetend of onwetend, deur ekonomiese kragte beïnvloed word. Bowenal beklemtoon dit dat menslike gedrag dikwels nie tot kompakte wiskundige ekonomiese teorieë en vergelykings gereduseer kan word nie – iets waaraan ekonomie as vakterrein meer doelbewus moet aandag skenk.

Terwyl sy in 2008 haar sabbatsverlof by die Stellenbosse Instituut vir Gevorderde Navorsing (STIAS) deurbring, skryf sy een van die boeke in haar trilogie The Bourgeois Era, waarin sy die geskiedenis van groot industriële nasies ondersoek om die heersende narratiewe oor die oorsprong van moderne welvaart te bevraagteken. Sy bly daarna ’n vriend van die Universiteit Stellenbosch, en in 2012 keer sy terug om as geleentheidspreker by die Wêreldkongres oor Ekonomiese Geskiedenis, met die Universiteit se Departement Ekonomie as gasheer, op te tree.

McCloskey is ’n uitgelese professor emeritus in ekonomie en geskiedenis, asook professor emeritus in Engels en kommunikasie aan die Universiteit van Illinois Chicago.

International capital flows and domestic financial stability

International capital flows can fuel investment, lower financing costs and boost economic activity, yet their volatility poses risks, especially for emerging-market economies with weaker regulatory frameworks. This study investigates how capital flow management tools – macroprudential policies, capital controls and foreign-exchange interventions – can establish a framework to enhance financial stability and counter the destabilising effects of extreme capital flow episodes. It assesses the trade-offs that these tools present between financial stability and economic growth, offering guidance to policymakers on how to strike a balance that sustains economic resilience and supports long-term growth.

Tax administration and domestic revenue mobilisation: An African perspective

Efficient tax administration is a core aspect of domestic tax revenue mobilisation. This study uses quantitative methods and case studies to investigate the efficiency of tax administration in African countries. It finds widespread inefficiency and identifies internal governance, the capacity to implement reforms, the quality of political leadership as well as principal-agent dynamics as key determinants of efficiency. Recommended efficiency-enhancing reforms include improvement of taxpayer registration databases, strengthening of mechanisms to deter tax evasion, and making tax administrations more responsive to taxpayers' needs. Good tax administration, elite dynamics and colonial legacies are also shown to strongly influence personal income tax revenues in African countries.

Exploring Administrative Micro-price Data in Uganda: Three Novel Applications

This study explores the price-setting behaviour of firms in Uganda using disaggregated micro-price data in three novel applications. The first finds that Ugandan prices are less sticky than prices in other countries. The second demonstrates that machine-learning models, particularly XGBoost, outperform traditional models in predicting price changes, with better accuracy for frequency than magnitude. The third explores the effects of conflict-induced displacement on prices, showing initial increases in price changes in Northern Uganda, which converge with other regions over time. All applications show the value of using microdata to better understand price dynamics.

Debra Lynne Shepherd

Dr Debra Shepherd is being recognised for excellence in Economics teaching in the Faculty of Economic and Management Sciences. Over the past 15 years, she has demonstrated innovative teaching practices, a commitment to student success, and a passion for social justice.

In Economics 114, a first-year module that she has taught for the past 13 years, her dedication to creating an inclusive, supportive learning environment fosters a sense of belonging among students. This encourages them to participate and develop critical thinking skills essential for academic and personal success.

Dr Shepherd has also helped introduce innovative courses such as Data Science for Economists, and Economics of Exclusion, both of which align academic content with real-world issues and foster socially conscious graduates. Underscoring her dedication to transformative education is her leadership as academic principal for the Validus Cluster, as well as her role in the 14-week Ubuntu Learning Short Course, an interdisciplinary programme taught at the Brandvlei Correctional Centre.

Her legacy is one of empowering students, challenging societal norms, and using education as a powerful tool for change.

Dr Debra Shepherd word erken vir uitnemendheid in Ekonomie-onderrig in die Fakulteit Ekonomiese en Bestuurswetenskappe. Sy het die afgelope 15 jaar vernuwendere onderrigpraktieke, 'n verbintenis tot studentesukses en 'n passie vir sosiale geregtigheid aan die dag gelê.

In Ekonomie 114, 'n eerstejaarmodule wat sy die afgelope 13 jaar aanbied, laat haar toewyding tot die skep van 'n inklusiewe, ondersteunende leeromgewing studente tuis voel. Dit moedig hulle aan om deel te neem en noodsaaklike kritiese denkvaardighede vir akademiese en persoonlike sukses te ontwikkel.

Dr Shepherd het ook innoverende kursusse soos Datawetenskap vir Ekonomie sowel as Ekonomie van Uitsluiting help bekend stel, wat albei akademiese inhoud met praktiese wêreldkwessies verbind en maatskaplik bewuste graduandi oplewer. 'n Verdere bewys van haar toewyding tot transformerende onderrig is haar leierskap as akademiese hoof van die Validus-kluster, en haar rol in die 14 weke lange Ubuntu-kortkursus, 'n interdisciplinêre program wat by die Brandvlei Korrektiewe Sentrum aangebied word.

Haar nalatenskap is een van studentebemagtiging, die bevraagtekening van samelewingsnorme, en die gebruik van onderwys as 'n kragtige instrument vir verandering.

An Exploratory Study of Governance Practices at the Student, Institutional, and Systems Level of Selected Higher Education Institutions in South Africa

This study examines governance practices at three public universities in South Africa from students' perspective. The qualitative findings indicate that students prefer universities to be governed by professional managers with an academic background. Students also believe that their involvement in decision-making is limited to specific areas and that they are often excluded from decisions affecting them. The study recommends enhanced representation for students' representative councils (SRCs) on university councils to align with other stakeholders. SRC member roles should also be made more permanent, while inclusion of a Convocation member would make it more egalitarian. Further research is needed on the impact of massification on university management and governance.

Exploring the contribution of an integrated coaching and mentoring framework to develop entrepreneurial self-efficacy in survival-driven entrepreneurs

This study explores the integration of the unique, dynamic attributes of coaching and mentoring to foster entrepreneurial self-efficacy in survival-driven entrepreneurs in the early stages of entrepreneurship. The resulting Integrated Coaching and Mentoring Entrepreneurial Development (ICMED) framework offers a unified source for developing entrepreneurial self-efficacy through coaches or mentors who adopt an integrated, holistic approach to entrepreneurial development, addressing the dynamic and fluctuating needs of survival-driven entrepreneurs. The evidence-based ICMED framework provides practical guidelines to coaches and mentors who seek to enhance the self-efficacy of these entrepreneurs, and to entrepreneurial development institutions who aim to support entrepreneurs.

Essays on second-generation stokvels: Their essential role in promoting financial inclusion in South Africa

Finance plays a critical role in economic development and growth at the micro, meso and macro levels. The traditional stokvel (or savings group) business model has played a significant role to bridge the financial inclusion gap. Yet it remains fragmented, shallow, myopic, and prone to various operational risks and inefficiencies. This study suggests that a properly designed second-generation stokvel could make a substantial contribution to closing the gap in South Africa, and could offer a diversity of financial services and products such as saving, credit, investment, insurance, and possibly also a micro pension scheme.

Social-ecological resilience in practice: Exploring capacities for navigating change in complex systems

This study helps address the challenges of the Anthropocene by advancing the concept of social-ecological resilience. It employs four approaches: a literature review on resilience definitions, an empirical assessment of resilience in South African horticulture, an analysis of cross-scale governance impacts on equity, and participatory futuring workshops. Findings highlight the normative shift in resilience definitions, the use of anticipative capacity to consider these definitions, the linkages between resources and resilience capacities, and the differential power dynamics in governance. The study proposes anticipative, absorptive, adaptive and transformative capacities as key mechanisms for navigating complex social-ecological systems, emphasising equity and governance fit.

The social-ecological factors shaping pathways to better water futures in South Africa

This study addresses the complex, interconnected challenges in the global water sector, focusing on South Africa's water governance. It investigates the social-ecological factors and processes that shape pathways to more sustainable, resilient and equitable water futures. Through four papers, it explores agents of change, boundary spanners, farmer resilience in water-scarce systems, and collaborative water governance. The findings highlight the importance of key agents, socio-cognitive constructs and social processes such as power and learning for enabling sustainability, resilience and equity. The study concludes with practical recommendations to help policymakers and practitioners navigate toward these desired water futures.

Equitable Water Governance and Water Politics in the Cubango-Okavango River Basin

This study examines transboundary water governance challenges and emphasises the need for inclusive, adaptive management. Using the Cubango-Okavango river basin as a case study, it explores state and non-state roles, legal pluralism, hydro-politics, and the potential of futures tools. Key findings highlight the importance of non-state actors, support for governance aligned with legal pluralism, and the adaptability of customary law. A water conflict typology reveals triggers at the basin and local level, suggesting the need for transformative governance that includes local voices and informal structures. The study advocates for adaptive governance grounded in social-ecological systems to ensure sustainable water management.

Critical Mass and Substantive Representation: A Study of the Legislative Effectiveness of Nominated Female Members of Country Assemblies in Kenya

This study examines the relationship between critical mass and the substantive representation of women in Kenya's county assemblies. Increased female representation has not led to a proportionate increase in the number of gender-responsive and gender-affirming laws. Nominated female members of assemblies do not occupy influential committee positions or leadership roles. The study recommends strengthening capacity-building programmes, promoting constituency engagement, and extending support mechanisms to nominated members of county assemblies. Targeted legislative training programmes, the implementation of mentorship initiatives, a review of committee appointments, the promotion of inclusive leadership and the conducting of public awareness campaigns are proffered as remedies.

Towards improved relevance of the Master of Business Administration: Competencies for the contextual practice of management in South Africa

This study investigates the competencies essential for the contextual practice of management in South Africa, particularly in relation to the Master of Business Administration (MBA). Through descriptive phenomenological research involving 20 senior managers, the study identifies 37 key competencies tailored to South Africa's unique social and economic landscape. Using Giorgi's analysis method and network analysis, the relationships between competencies are mapped, and a framework of contextually relevant managerial competencies is developed. The study provides insights valuable to curriculum designers, policymakers and business schools, contributing to the enhancement of MBA programmes to be more responsive to South Africa's management needs.

Alternative futures of gig work in South Africa

Taking a multi-domain approach, this study explores the development of alternative futures for the gig economy in South Africa towards 2025. Through a suite of tools and techniques, eight pivotal factors are identified to develop four archetype scenarios of gig work in South Africa towards 2035. These scenarios could deepen the conversation about gig work and provide scholars and practitioners with insights on the interplay and interdependencies between factors from different domains. In addition, a novel framework that incorporates continuous quality assessment is developed to guide the study. This framework may be useful to other scholars in the field of futures studies.

The Impact of Agricultural Credit on Demand for Factors of Production, Farm Productivity, Efficiency and Technological Gap Ratio in Kenya

Coffee farming contributes significantly to the economic development of several subsistence economies by providing a source of income for smallholder farmers, creating jobs along the value chain, and contributing foreign-exchange earnings. This study employs a quasi-experimental design that includes 174 smallholder coffee farmers and the Kenyan Commodity Fund to estimate the impact of credit on the demand for inputs, coffee production efficiency, and technology gap ratios. The results show a higher demand for inputs, increased production and productivity, as well as more technical efficiency among participating farmers. These findings represent further evidence that finance does boost economic development.

Jennifer Saunders

Jennifer Saunders personifies excellence in handling the academic administration and operations management of postgraduate programmes in both Environmental Management and Public Development Management in the Faculty of Economic and Management Sciences.

Ms Saunders's strategic thinking, attention to detail and high ethical standards foster trust, effective teamwork and a supportive academic environment, which enables students to navigate complex academic requirements. Her deep understanding of civic affairs and her approachable demeanour also promote meaningful engagement with colleagues and students alike.

With a background in Library and Information Science, she has expertise in research, technical editing and standardisation of academic materials. As co-author of three book chapters on writing skills and social research methodologies, she has successfully bridged the gap between operational support and scholarship. Through this work, Ms Saunders not only empowers students and researchers, but has also proven herself a well-rounded professional dedicated to success in higher education.

Beyond her administrative role, Ms Saunders has over 14 years of entrepreneurial experience, contributing to the economic development and tourism in Stellenbosch. Her work reflects a strong commitment to both academic excellence and community growth.

Jennifer Saunders is die toonbeeld van uitnemendheid in die hantering van die akademiese administrasie en bedryfsbestuur van nagraadse programme in sowel Omgewingsbestuur as Openbare Ontwikkelingsbestuur in die Fakulteit Ekonomiese en Bestuurswetenskappe.

Me Saunders se strategiese denke, aandag aan detail en hoë etiese standaarde boesem vertroue in en bevorder doeltreffende spanwerk en 'n ondersteunende akademiese omgewing, wat studente aan komplekse akademiese vereistes help voldoen. Haar diep insig in burgerlike sake en haar toeganklikheid lei boonop tot sinvolle skakeling met kollegas én studente.

Met 'n agtergrond in Biblioteek- en Inligtingswetenskap is sy boonop 'n kenner van navorsing, tegniese redigering en die standaardisering van akademiese materiaal. As medeskrywer van drie boekhoofstukke oor skryfvaardighede en sosiale navorsingsmetodologieë, het sy die gaping tussen bedryfsondersteuning en akademieskap suksesvol oorbrug. Deur dié werk bemagtig me Saunders nie net studente en navorsers nie, maar toon sy haar ook 'n afgeronde beroepspersoon wat toegewy is aan sukses in die hoër onderwys.

Behalwe haar administratiewe rol, het me Saunders meer as 14 jaar entrepreneurondervinding. In dié tyd het sy tot die ekonomiese ontwikkeling en toerisme in Stellenbosch bygedra. Haar werk weerspieël 'n sterk verbintenis tot akademiese uitmuntendheid en gemeenskapsontwikkeling.
